'She is so vain that she drinks through a straw'

Bho Roosterman-Vroegen (33) is married and works as a costume designer for film and television. "We often have to get our passports out to show that we are twin sisters. That is how different Femmy and I are. With her 1.5 m Femmy is a head shorter. Even though she often feels unhappy about that, I on the other hand like that she is a mini woman. We're both slimming, although I don't think she has anything to complain about: she's thirty kilos lighter than me. My sister is a beautiful woman. She has thick hair, beautiful eyes and a full mouth. She doesn't wear make-up and that's a pity, because mascara looks really good on her. For someone who doesn't use make-up, Femmy has a peculiar hobby. She knows everything about beauty products and there are at least fifty cream jars on her dressing table. She's addicted to La Prairie and La Mer but she also gets products flown in from America. She's not stingy, because she often gives me a jar. Once a month she goes to the hairdresser's and she regularly gets her teeth bleached. In fact, she is very vain: she drinks through a straw to prevent her teeth from becoming yellow. Her skin is everything to her. That's why she never sits in the sun and she puts factor seventy on her face every day. She had her skin scrubbed, she lasers spots and for each wrinkle she sees she gets out the Botox syringe. Ugh, not for me, but if that makes her feel good, it's up to her. I think it's funny that Femmy is so occupied with her appearance. Especially because she absolutely doesn't have a big ego and is always there for everybody. Also for me. We are inseparable, without Femmy I feel amputated."

'Suck it out and cut it out'

Femmy Blakely-Roosterman (33) is married and works as an assistant costume designer and dresser. "I think Bho is so beautiful that I'm sometimes jealous of her. I used to call her turned-up nose a ski jump, but now I would change noses any time. The same goes for her doll's eyes with Hollywood eye-lashes. While I'm busy with powders and curling iron, she's a natural beauty. Although, when we were young we both had braces for three years, but that didn't really work for my sister. It's all askew again, but Bho isn't bothered. That's to her credit and it's one of the reasons why I love her. She is creative and is far ahead of the trends. She's known for her own dress style, even though some may call her possessed. When we were living together, we'd sleep in one bed because Bho needed the other bedroom for her outfits. Her red lips are her trademark. She has at least fifteen lipsticks, with Yves Saint Laurent and Chanel being her favorites. At my advice Bho puts on factor thirty on her face. Because she has big pores I gave her a cream by Doctor Brand, the Botox king from America. The only thing she's really worried about is her weight. We both ate too many well-filled sandwiches when we were fifteen. You can't get rid of that old fat by just doing sports. That's why I sometimes say: suck it out and cut it out. Not because I want to stuff Bho in a size 38, but because she is precious to me and I worry about her health."
